HOUSING SEGREGATION AND REDLINING IN AMERICA

The sources below narrate the societal/government responses to and impacts of the crack epidemic (1980s) and the opioid epidemic (2010s). The actions taken to address these public health crises were drastically different, from policies to stigmatization. The demographics predominantly affected by these epidemics also differed. Check out the resources below to learn more and utilize a critical lens to question how and why the responses to these epidemics were so varied. Consider the impacts that the responses have had on the communities impacted by these epidemics.
